Fred A. Twomey, the traveling man had a plunge in the rushing waters of Stout's Creek, while trying to ford at the Shut-in Sunday evening. He had been out to Roselle and was on his way to Ironton. When he arrived at prelides at the evening service on the Shut-in ford he saw the creek was some things the Valley needs. The part of the morning service on the shut-in ford he saw the creek was up but thought he could cross in safe-ty. He drove in; as he reached the ty. He drove in; as he reached the rushing waters the buggy overturned and man, horse and buggy were swept down the stream. Fred battled manfally, however, and after the waters had carried him fifty yards or more, finally effected a landing, thoroughly drenched and nearly exhausted. It was a narrow escape, indeed, and it is safe to say that hereafter Fred will think twice before he attempts to ford a mountain stream after a rain like that of Sunday. The horse and bugthat of Sunday. The horse and bug-gy were carried some distance but the horse finally extricated himself and got to land. The buggy was disman-iled and parts of it, together with Mr. Twomey's hat, which he lost in the swim, are now doubtless drifting down the St. Francis into the lowlands of

An Evening at the College.

In response to a kind invitation from the good Sisters of Arcadia Col-lege, I last Monday night attended an rtainment given by the fair pupils of that institution. Beginning at eight o'clock, for two hours we were re-galed with the numbers that made up the programme, unique in conception and delighting in execution. The presence of youth and beauty, happy and trustful in the heyday of life, is always congenial to us in "the sere and yellow leaf." It springs anew thoughts not given to the grosser con-cerns of earth and clasps hands with the memory of the time when the morn of life was roseate and the rising sun clothed existence in glorious promise. As I looked upon the fair promise. As I looked upon the fair faces and graceful forms that filled the stage and pleased my vision, not one but had my prayer for all things that go to the acquisition of worth and happiness. The picturesque and quaint costumes of the various oldworld peoples and the filmy draperies of ancient mythological character lent additional charms to bright eyes and rosy cheeks, and for a time I dwelt in lands afar, in scenes before known to lands afar, in scenes before known to me only in the conception of brush and pen. And the music and the dance! How fine it all was! To particularize (if the term be admissible would be invidious, where all was good, and I have not the art of technical praise. I only know I enjoyed it, from start to finish-from the elegant "introductory" read by one of the young ladies, Miss Keyes, of Fredericktown, to the inspiring ableau closing the entertainment. Here follow the explanatory in-troductory and the programme: From pre-historic time Terpsichore held her sister-twin by the hand and literally danced her into the visible expression of rhythm or the classical form of music; nor need we seek far for the cause of this, since every human being is a rhythmic machine, and spiders, mice, horses and elephants along with all animate nature, even to the tiny leaf, gracefully yielding to the gentle breeze, bow in appreciation of rhythm.

Primeval dancing probably began in a desire to kick, and this natural outcome of hearty animal spirit within was combined with a more artificial touch, a desire to mimic. We know that all the savage dances are gesture and dramatic mimicry. At an early period religion claimed a large share of the saltatorial exercises, and the ing a ceremonial or festival.

When the Israelites danced around the golden calf, they were but imi-tating the olden dance which took place around the altar of the bull Apis in Egypt. It was during the middle ages that the Church ceased to recognize the art as a ceremonial, possibly on account of its pagan origin, though his-tory tells us that the Geisler or Flajellant was in use in Spain as late

Strangely enough these sacrificial dances have strayed down through the ages in the form of children's games, and in their circling around Little Sally Waters" one is observing a survival of the worship of an ancient Egyptian god. In connection it may be stated that much of ancient history is to be found embedded in children's music and children's games. We know that "Three Blind Mice" takes us back as far as 1609, while "Fly Away Lady-bug" carries us to the dreadful conflagration of the Thirty Years War in Pomera

Folk song and folk dance which are making their way into modern sym-phony and adding a new life-blood to the old form are but the embodiment of a nation's history, a nation's character which has developed a mong various peoples and has becom

The aucient secular dances were largely gymnastic; or mimetic, that is, conveying emotion by gesture.

The Grecian dance presented on our program, protrays the mythological relation between Daphne, Maio of the Morning Mist, and Apollo, who strives to win her love. She enjoying herseif at early dawn, suddenly per-ceives Appollo's approach, seeks to flee from death by every conceivable way—she prostrates before him, then pleads with outstretched arms, which she flees from place to place trying to escape all his devouring flames, but he finally succeeds, and she veils herself, crosses her hands upon her breast in resignation to her

To the patriotic German what legend more dear than the great Heine's "Die Lorelei" made famous in music by the world-renowned master, Franz simple melody which has been trans itted through generations.

Every one is familiar with the musical talent existing among the Italian and Spanish, and the evolution of their dance with its high, gliding movements and circling turns is typical of the ease with which these ple are enamoured.

debted for the Kamarinskala, Russia's great harbaric dance of one hundred and fifty gyrating movements. It may be well to know that nearly all may be well to know that nearly an of these steps are commemorative of some Russian feat, as a great victory, lean sorrow—a number of or some deep sorrow—a number of them were added to represent Moscow's great conflagration. spite of them a'."

To the Stars and Stripes let us hall in grateful appreciation for the highly cultured Minuet de la Coeur. To trace the history of this dance we must turn back the pages several centuries before the discovery of America when the "prosessional" held sway over the populace who clamoured for gyrating movements. Hall, all ed for gyrating movements. Hall, all hail, then, to our Lady Washington who tripped this message of culture and refinement as a token par excel-lence to succeeding generations.
